GSTAAD, 18 February 2021 – Concerts streamed live from the Sommetts Musicaux de Gstaad 2021 have been watched far beyond the borders of Switzerland

For their 21st edition, the Sommetts Musicaux de Gstaad have managed to overcome all the difficulties and obstacles they have had to face. The festival's staff, artistic director Renaud Capuçon and the artists scheduled to perform have shown remarkable patience and great flexibility right up to the very last minute, given the magnitude of the restrictions and challenges they have faced. It was decided that the festival would go ahead, with a view to spreading a message of hope and in a spirit of solidarity with the artists who have suffered so much and the audiences who have been deprived of concerts for so long.

Five concerts were streamed live on the Sommetts Musicaux de Gstaad's website and YouTube channel. These were concerts of exceptional musical quality in which the delight of the musicians at being able to meet and share the moment with their audience was plain to see. This, of course, was an audience that had to be imagined, but still very much present, with 20,000 people watching the five concerts and 40,000 visiting the festival's various platforms over the course of the week. The festival's organizational team was pleasantly surprised by the enthusiasm generated by this unique event, with a virtual audience assembled from far beyond the borders of Switzerland. This excitement can be seen in the comments and palpable enthusiasm of an audience evidently grateful for these concerts available to watch again and again on the Sommetts Musicaux de Gstaad's website and YouTube channel. The festival is also delighted with the outstanding broadcast quality of these concerts, and is grateful to its partners RTS – Espace 2 and Mezzo/Medici. This year's concerts were also a great success on Medici TV. Broadcast from 3 to 7 February 2021 and available free of charge on the medici.tv website, our concerts were viewed by a total audience of 60'000 people in 82 countries and 771 cities. The 2018-2020 programme of the Festival Sommetts Musicaux de Gstaad will be in the spotlight on Mezzo TV in March 2021 as part of the Swiss Month campaign. The concerts of the 2021 edition will be broadcast at a later date on RTS – Espace 2 and Mezzo. We will keep you updated on the broadcast dates on our various platforms.

The Sommetts Musicaux de Gstaad would also like to take this opportunity to thank its sponsors, and the companies, associations and corporate partners that support it, such as Vera Michalski-Hoffmann, president of the Festival, Les Amis des Sommetts Musicaux de Gstaad – the friends of the festival – the municipality of Saanen and surrounding towns, the canton of Bern and the Loterie Romande, as well as the Gstaad Palace, to name only a few, without whose support the 2021 festival could not have happened. Thanks are also due to the media outlets that have been an invaluable support to the festival in communicating its message.

The festival is pleased to invite you to its 22nd edition, from 28 January to 5 February 2022. We can already announce that the young violinists in contention for the Prix Thierry Scherz and the Prix André Hoffmann who were unable to appear this year will be on the programme next year:

A brief look at the Sommets Musicaux de Gstaad

From its inception in 2001, the Sommets Musicaux de Gstaad has been hailed as the ultimate reference point in winter festivals, an event to delight all aficionados of classical music. Every year young talented musicians, internationally renowned artists and lovers of music gather in this enchanting snow-capped paradise to perform and enjoy some of the finest works in the classical repertory.

The festival is structured in three categories: three concert cycles spread across three outstanding venues. In the afternoon, the Gstaad Chapel hosts a selection of the most promising young artists. In the evening, the churches of Rougemont and Saanen will delight their audiences with the sounds of celebrated soloists and internationally renowned orchestras.
